

Title of Motion Picture

The Elephant's Trunk (Lotte)

Produced and Manufactured by

PATHÉ EXCHANGE, Inc.

NEW YORK, N. Y.

Copyrighted

©CLM 2193

Fables Pictures, Inc.
1562 Broadway, New York City
SEP 27 '22

FABLE NO. 73

©C1M 2193

RELEASED - Nov. 4, 1922

THE FABLE OF
THE ELEPHANT'S TRUNK

Filed
Rutgers Neilson
News Editor

Eddie and Freddie are a gay pair of Elephants who spend most of their time bathing in a tiny lake. Eddie is a dare-devil and climbs a tall tree to make a high dive. Just as he dives, Freddie playfully drinks all the water out of the lake and Eddie plunges head first into soft mud. Freddie is quick to rescue his brother and washes the mud off him. After perusing an animal book, little Jack decides to hunt Elephants. He tells his dog, Fido, and the canine becomes a pointer. As they walk along, Fido sees a trio of mice come out of a nearby river and search in vain for their pants which have been stolen. Fido, runs around in circles until he is out of breath and transforms his "pants" into wearable ones for the little rodents. The mice are very grateful for his kindness. Jack and Fido mount a high place and sight Eddie Elephant reclining in a hammock. The boy takes careful aim and hits Eddie, who falls out of the hammock and runs away. The boy and dog pursue him. Eddie runs up a mountain peak and stands upon the top of the peak. Bit by bit, Jack shoots away the mountain peak under Eddie's feet. Soon the Elephant loses his footing and rolls down the precipitous incline. To avoid being hit by the beast, Jack and Fido rush down ahead and seeing an ostrich hiding his head in the sand, do likewise. Eddie Elephant rolls passed them and suddenly stops. Then, he goes into his trunk and locks the lid. Jack and Fido try many methods, but can not dislodge the Elephant. But, Fido gets an idea. He runs to the home of his mice friends and asks their assistance. The mice scamper over to the trunk and get under the lid. We all know how an Elephant fears a mouse. Well Eddie is no exception, and the trio of mice make him restless. Then, they pull him out of his trunk. Jack jumps upon Eddie's back and the mice bid adieu, having returned the kindness of Fido in replacing their lost pants. Friends have helped friends.

Thus we learn the moral that- "A Friend In Need Is A Friend Indeed."

* * * * *

Fables Pictures, Inc.
1562 Broadway, New York City
SEP 27 '22

FABLE NO. 73

©CIM 2193 ✓

RELEASED - Nov. 4, 1922

THE FABLE OF
THE ELEPHANT'S TRUNK ✓

Filed
Rutgers Neilson
News Editor

Eddie and Freddie are a gay pair of Elephants who spend most of their time bathing in a tiny lake. Eddie is a dare-devil and climbs a tall tree to make a high dive. Just as he dives, Freddie playfully drinks all the water out of the lake and Eddie plunges head first into soft mud. Freddie is quick to rescue his brother and washes the mud off him. After perusing an animal book, little Jack decides to hunt Elephants. He tells his dog, Fido, and the canine becomes a pointer. As they walk along, Fido sees a trio of mice come out of a nearby river and search in vain for their pants which have been stolen. Fido, runs around in circles until he is out of breath and transforms his "pants" into wearable ones for the little rodents. The mice are very grateful for his kindness. Jack and Fido mount a high place and sight Eddie Elephant reclining in a hammock. The boy takes careful aim and hits Eddie, who falls out of the hammock and runs away. The boy and dog pursue him. Eddie runs up a mountain peak and stands upon the top of the peak. Bit by bit, Jack shoots away the mountain peak under Eddie's feet. Soon the Elephant loses his footing and rolls down the precipitous incline. To avoid being hit by the beast, Jack and Fido rush down ahead and seeing an ostrich hiding his head in the sand, do likewise. Eddie Elephant rolls passed them and suddenly stops. Then, he goes into his trunk and locks the lid. Jack and Fido try many methods but can not dislodge the Elephant. But, Fido gets an idea. He runs to the home of his mice friends and asks their assistance. The mice scamper over to the trunk and get under the lid. We all know how an Elephant fears a mouse. Well Eddie is no exception, and the trio of mice make him restless. Then, they pull him out of his trunk. Jack jumps upon Eddie's back and the mice bid adieu, having returned the kindness of Fido in replacing their lost pants. Friends have helped friends.

Thus we learn the moral that- "A Friend In Need Is A Friend Indeed."

* * * * *

This document is from the Library of Congress
“Motion Picture Copyright Descriptions Collection,
1912-1977”

Collections Summary:

The Motion Picture Copyright Descriptions Collection, Class L and Class M, consists of forms, abstracts, plot summaries, dialogue and continuity scripts, press kits, publicity and other material, submitted for the purpose of enabling descriptive cataloging for motion picture photoplays registered with the United States Copyright Office under Class L and Class M from 1912-1977.

Class L Finding Aid:

<https://hdl.loc.gov/loc.mbrsmi/eadmbrsmi.mi020004>

Class M Finding Aid:

<https://hdl.loc.gov/loc.mbrsmi/eadmbrsmi.mi021002>

National Audio-Visual Conservation Center
The Library of Congress